                  Opt:    Wendel, Possesory Estates and Future Interests Primer, 2nd ed., West. (ISBN #0314238190)
                  Opt:    Burke & Snow, Property – Examples and Explanations, 2nd ed., Aspen. (ISBN #0735539990)

Assignment:     Read Dukeminier and Krier, pages 3, 9-10 (note 1), pages 11-15 (notes 3 and 4), pages 16 (note 6) -23. I have not assigned the first case in the book, Johnson v. M'Intosh, although you are welcome to read it. In essence, it reflects the proposition that the person that is "first in time" to discover and possess something will become its owner as long as the thing (or land) is not owned by anyone else. The assigned notes reflect and discuss these principles. You should ask yourself why "first in time" is an appropriate principle to follow. Then consider what constitutes "first in time." Be prepared to discuss why Pierson v. Post came out as it did. Why didn't Post qualify as "first in time" under the circumstances? How would you argue that he should have won the case?
