J. 187	Disclaimers: I was a legal-scholar-in-residence at the Federal Communications Commission in 1997-98, where I participated via an interagency working group in the U.S. government's policymaking process regarding management of Internet names and addresses during the period leading up to the release of the Green Paper. More recently, I was the co-chair of a working group established by ICANN's Names Council to formulate recommendations regarding the deployment of new generic top-level domains. The views expressed in this Article, however, are solely my own: I do not and could not speak for the U.S. government, the Names Council, or the working group.
