Please congratulate Nancy Stott, an administrative assistant in the George W. Davario School of Accountancy, who is the Ziptastic Award winner for August.

Stott, who joined UA in 1991, worked first in the Zip Card Office. In 1992, she became an administrative assistant in the Department of Athletics. In 2015, she moved to the School of Accountancy as an administrative assistant to Dr. Thomas Calderon, who nominated her for the award.

"Her service to the school, the college and the University has been exemplary and she is highly deserving of this award," noted Calderon, chair and professor of accounting. "She has been highly responsive to the needs of students, faculty and external stakeholders.

"A pleasure to work with, Nancy has done all that she has been asked to do and often goes beyond the call of duty to help," Calderon continued.

"I have not heard our external stakeholders give as many superlative compliments to any other administrator on campus during my 29 years at the University. She is always prompt in responding to their needs and follows-up diligently to ensure that they are satisfied with her service and their needs are fulfilled."

Calderon also praised Stott's efforts on several outreach activities, such as the school's three tax conferences and a major financial reporting symposium. "We average approximately 200 professionals at these conferences, and they all are executed exceptionally well because of her attention to the requisite detail.

"Nancy never says no to an opportunity to assist a student, a faculty member, a peer administrative assistant and many others," added Calderon. "Her attitude as well as her consistency in completing her tasks and in supporting others when needed epitomize what I have often referred to as displaying a culture of service."
