Eligible graduate students can qualify for a Federal Direct Unsubsidized Loans. The maximum limit is $20,500 per academic year.

Know Your Loan Limits
Undergraduate loan amounts count toward your lifetime aggregate limit as a graduate student ($138,500). You can keep track of how much you’ve borrowed by logging into the National Student Loan Data System (NSLDS) at nslds.ed.gov using your FSA ID and password.

Need More Money?
Talk to your academic department for information about any available scholarships, assistantships or other resources for graduate students. Keep in mind that these are considered financial aid and may impact the amount of loan eligibility you will qualify for.

If the annual amount of Federal Direct Loans is not enough to meet your expenses, you may apply for a Graduate PLUS Loan at studentloans.gov. This is a credit-based unsubsidized loan with the Department of Education. Graduate students can borrow a combination of financial resources up to their cost of attendance.
